

THE UNIVERSITY
of EDINBURGH

THE UNIVERSITY
OF EDINBURGH
Divinity
POSTGRADUATE
OPPORTUNITIES

2016 ENTRY

THE UNIVERSITY OF EDINBURGH: INFLUENCING THE WORLD SINCE 1583

- 02 Welcome to the School of Divinity
- 03 Facilities and resources
- 04 Employability and graduate attributes
- 05 Taught masters programmes
- 09 Research at the School of Divinity
- 10 Research opportunities
- 13 How to apply
- 14 Funding
- 16 Campus map
- 17 Get in touch

“You are now in a place where the best courses upon Earth are within your reach ... such an opportunity you will never again have.”

Thomas Jefferson, American Founding Father and President (speaking to his son-in-law, Thomas Mann Randolph, as he began his studies at Edinburgh in 1786)

The University

Our proud history and alumni ambassadors

For more than 400 years our staff and students have been making their mark on the world. They've explored space, revolutionised surgery, won Nobel Prizes, published era-defining books, run the country, paved the way for life-saving breakthroughs and laid the foundations for solving the mysteries of the universe. By choosing further study or research at Edinburgh you will be joining a community of scholars who have been at the forefront of knowledge since 1583.

We are associated with 20 Nobel Prize winners, including physicists Peter Higgs, Charles Barkla and Max Born, medical researcher Peter Doherty, economist Sir James Mirrlees and biologist Sir Paul Nurse. Our distinguished alumni include NASA astronaut Piers Sellers, former MI5 Director-General Dame Stella Rimington, Olympians Sir Chris Hoy and Katherine Grainger and historical greats such as philosopher David Hume, physicist and mathematician James Clerk Maxwell, inventor Alexander Graham Bell and Sherlock Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

Teaching and research excellence

We are consistently ranked as one of the world's top 50 universities. We are 17th in the 2014/15 QS World University Rankings. As host to more than 30,000 students from some 137 countries, studying across 100 academic disciplines, the University of Edinburgh continues to attract the world's greatest minds. In the Research Excellence Framework (REF) 2014, 83 per cent of our research was judged world-leading or internationally excellent. We're ranked fourth in the UK for research power, based on the quality and breadth of our research. Our excellent teaching was also confirmed in the latest report from the Quality Assurance Agency, which awarded us the highest rating possible for the quality of the student learning experience.

Collaborations and international partnerships

As an internationally renowned centre of academic excellence, Edinburgh is the site of many world-class research collaborations. Our postgraduate students are crucial to our continued success and development and, along with our staff, they forge research links through regular travel and overseas exchanges. We take pride in our partnerships with other institutions such as the California Institute of Technology (Caltech), Stanford University, the University of Melbourne, Peking University, the University of Delhi and the University of KwaZulu-Natal – to name but a few. We are a member of both the League of European Research Universities and the Coimbra Group, giving us strong links with leading European institutions from Barcelona to Berlin.

Linking research and commerce

Edinburgh was one of the first UK universities to actively develop commercial links with industry, government and the professions. Edinburgh Research and Innovation (ERI) has continued, for the past four decades, to develop the promotion and commercialisation of the University's research excellence. ERI assists our postgraduates in taking a first step to market, whether it is through collaborative research, licensing technology or providing consultancy services.

Enhancing your career

We're ranked 18th in the world for the employability of our graduates.* With one of the best track records for graduate employment in the Russell Group, we are committed to embedding employability into your teaching and learning experience. From offering access to volunteering schemes to providing support from our sector-leading Careers Service, the University provides myriad opportunities to develop your skills, knowledge and experience giving you the edge in a competitive job market.

An inspiring destination

Your first-class education will take place in one of Europe's most striking capital cities, a UNESCO World Heritage Site that is regularly voted one of the best places in the world to live. Edinburgh enjoys a solid reputation as a centre for innovation, whether as home to the 18th-century Scottish Enlightenment, as a modern source of pioneering science, medicine and technology, or as the host of the world's largest and longest-established arts festival. You couldn't ask for a more inspiring setting in which to further your knowledge and broaden your horizons.

Join us

Edinburgh offers unparalleled academic breadth and diversity, making it a vibrant, challenging and stimulating environment for postgraduate study. Whether you plan to change direction, enhance your existing career or develop in-depth knowledge of your area of study, the University of Edinburgh provides a world-class learning experience.

* Latest Emerging Global Employability University Rankings

WELCOME TO THE SCHOOL OF DIVINITY

Theology has been taught at Edinburgh since the foundation of the University in 1583. Now housed in the historic New College building near Edinburgh Castle, the School of Divinity occupies a commanding city-centre site on the Mound, overlooking Princes Street Gardens, the Scottish National Gallery and the Royal Scottish Academy.

Our community comprises 450 students (undergraduate and postgraduate) and nearly 30 full-time academic staff, including internationally respected scholars in a wide range of specialisms. We welcome students from around the world, from religious and non-religious backgrounds, taking pride in our status as a renowned research centre in a broad spectrum of subject areas.

Top-rated research

The School of Divinity has consistently scored exceptionally highly in research assessments.

The Research Excellence Framework (REF) 2014 ranked us first in Scotland and fourth in the UK for theology and religious studies. Overall, 78 per cent of our research was rated world-leading or internationally excellent.

On research environment, we scored 100 per cent at either world-leading or internationally excellent level, a testimony to our extremely strong research culture – putting us second in the UK on this front in theology and religion.

Leading lights

Our School is led by some of the UK's most respected and high-profile scholars of theology and religion.

The Principal of New College, Professor David Fergusson, served as Chair of the UK Association of University Departments of Theology and Religious Studies until 2008, and has delivered the Gifford Lectures (Glasgow) and Birks Lectures (McGill University, Montreal). He was elected a Fellow of the British Academy in 2013.

The University's Assistant Principal for Religion and Society is Professor Mona Siddiqui, one of Britain's leading professors of Islamic and inter-religious studies. Professor Siddiqui is a regular contributor to BBC Radio 4's Thought for the Day, as well as to the Times, the Scotsman, the Guardian, the Sunday Herald and the Tablet.

Professor Michael Northcott, Professor of Ethics, is the lead researcher on a three-year interdisciplinary project funded by a major award from the AHRC/ESRC, entitled 'Caring for the Future Through Ancestral Time: Engaging the Cultural and Spiritual Presence of the Past to Promote a Sustainable Future'.

Dr Helen Bond, Director of the School's Centre for the Study of Christian Origins, is a distinguished historian of the period of the New Testament writings. In addition to her academic publications, Dr Bond is active in mediating scholarship more widely through her work for BBC Radio 3 and 4, and has contributed to a number of television programmes for the BBC and Channel 4.

Professor Jolyon Mitchell brings together expertise in media, arts and religion as Director of the Centre for Theology and Public Issues. He was the only British member of the International Study Commission on Media, Religion & Culture, which consisted of 13 scholars from nations as diverse as Australia, Colombia, Ghana, Italy, Mexico, Thailand and the United States.

Professor Brian Stanley, a leading interpreter of the past century's shifting patterns in the global diffusion of Christianity, is Professor of World Christianity and the Director of the Centre for the Study of World Christianity. He is also editor of the journal Studies in World Christianity.

Facilities and resources

The School of Divinity has its own unique library, dining and socialising areas, and a strong sense of community between students and staff, as well as being part of a large, world-class university.

We take a personal interest in our students and offer a welcoming and friendly setting in which to pursue the exciting and demanding study of theology and religious studies.

New College Library has one of the largest theology collections in the UK, with more than a quarter of a million items and a large and rich manuscript collection, including the papers of Thomas Chalmers, John Baillie, JH Oldham and James S Stewart.

The strengths of the Library collections contribute greatly to the teaching and research of members of the School as well as students elsewhere in the University. These collections are complemented by the many resources available in the University and beyond. The total holdings in all the University libraries exceed 2.25 million volumes. In addition, the National Library of Scotland holds more than five million volumes. The New College Library boasts a magnificent reading hall, originally built as the sanctuary of the Free High Kirk.

The School provides extensive and well-equipped computing facilities for coursework and research at all levels, including dissertations. We provide all students with access to PCs, scanners and printers, across four labs.

Postgraduate students are provided with dedicated study spaces in the Ramsay Lane Wing and Semples Close Wing of New College. Both are accessible 24 hours a day via a secure swipe-card entry system.

New College's gothic Rainy Hall provides a marvellous setting for dining and a welcoming social space for lively conversation and informal debate. The New College complex is also home to the General Assembly Hall of the Church of Scotland.

Collections of the University

The University's collections are unique in their depth and diversity. Managed by the Centre for Research Collections, and housed in our Main Library at the heart of our central campus, they span more than 500,000 rare books, artworks from around the world, historically significant musical instrument collections, specialist museum collections, and manuscripts.

Highlights include the world's oldest surviving Gaelic text; Adam Smith's original library; Alexander Fleming's sample of mould used to make penicillin; original quartos of Shakespeare plays, with notes in the margins from 16th-century actors; the thermometer of chemist Joseph Black; and original Sir Isaac Newton diagrams in David Gregory manuscripts of 1692.

University archivists – with a broad spectrum of expertise – make it their priority to ensure these items are accessible to our students, researchers and staff.

Virtual tour

A panoramic tour of New College:
www.ed.ac.uk/schools-departments/divinity/about/tour

“My experience at New College was part of what trained me to think. My dissertation was on ‘Augustine, Scripture and Power’, and I’ve been thinking about how people use and think about power ever since.”

David Nussbaum, School of Divinity alumnus, Chief Executive of WWF UK

Employability and graduate attributes

Here at Edinburgh we believe in offering you the best possible support in your studies and in preparation for your future. Our local learning support along with the central Careers Service play a large part in this.

Institute for Academic Development

All of our postgraduate students can benefit from the University's Institute for Academic Development (IAD), which provides information, events and courses to develop the skills you will need throughout your studies and in the future.

Further information is available online: www.ed.ac.uk/iad/postgraduates

For taught postgraduates, the IAD provides a growing range of tailored study-related and transferable skills workshops, plus online advice and learning resources. These are all designed to help you settle into postgraduate life, succeed during your studies, and move confidently to the next stage of your career.

The IAD also offers one of the longest-established researcher development training packages in the UK. Our experts will help you gain the skills, knowledge and confidence needed to move on to the next stage in your career, be that in academia or beyond.

The Institute provides research students with dedicated training in topics such as research management; personal effectiveness; communication skills; public engagement, networking and teamworking; leadership; and career management. You can gain expertise in information technology and presentation skills; confidence in undertaking independent and creative research; the ability to critically evaluate source materials; and the capacity to construct intellectually rigorous arguments. By developing these broader professional skills and qualities, our postgraduate students are always in high demand.

Careers Service

The University's award-winning Careers Service aims to expand the horizons of all our students, empowering you to make successful career decisions. It works closely with the University's Employability Consultancy to support students to take advantage of every opportunity to enhance your employability while studying.

The Service provides specialist support for postgraduate students to help with career planning and decision making. Its team of friendly experts can support you to explore different career options, identify your skills and what you want out of a career, think about effective job search strategies, and prepare for job applications and interviews.

The Service has a team dedicated to developing our already strong links with employers from all industries and employment sectors; from the world's top recruiters to small enterprises based here in Edinburgh. The team provides a programme of opportunities for students to meet employers on campus and virtually, and advertises a wide range of part-time and graduate jobs.

More information: www.ed.ac.uk/careers/postgrad

Connect.ed

Edinburgh encourages its alumni to stay in touch with current students who are interested in a similar career path. Connect.ed is a networking system run by the Careers Service that provides a confidential opportunity for alumni to share their occupational knowledge and experience with current students, who can contact them for advice and guidance on their future career.

More information: www.ed.ac.uk/careers/connected

Backing bright ideas

LAUNCH.ed is the University's award-winning programme for student entrepreneurs. Each year, LAUNCH.ed works with hundreds of students to assess their ideas and develop their business skills and helps many start their businesses. We have helped Edinburgh students and alumni launch almost 100 new businesses in the last three years, ranging from language tuition to robotics companies.

More information: www.LAUNCH.ed.ac.uk

A postgraduate degree from the School of Divinity prepares you for a vast array of employment, depending on your subject area.

You will develop transferable skills, which could be applied in a wide range of careers such as advocacy, community development, counselling, crisis services, public relations, journalism, social work and teaching.

Taught masters programmes

We offer five taught masters programmes, most of which can be taken either as a Master of Theology (MTh) or a Master of Science (MSc), the difference being one of nomenclature only.

Our taught masters programmes are designed to deepen knowledge in a subject you will typically have studied at undergraduate level, although they can in some cases offer a new direction in your academic career.

Taught masters programmes take 12 months, consisting of two semesters of taught courses followed by an individual, supervised dissertation. They can also be studied part-time over two years by UK and EU students.

See also...

You may also be interested in postgraduate programmes offered by other Schools, particularly the Schools of History, Classics & Archaeology; Literatures, Languages & Cultures; Philosophy, Psychology & Language Sciences; and Social & Political Science.

www.ed.ac.uk/studying/prospectus-request

“My time at New College was valuable and rewarding. All the resources a PhD student needs to complete a top-class project are available: a first-rate faculty who, in spite of their many responsibilities, take ample time for the student; substantial libraries on site and around the city; and a warm community that sharpens and challenges you personally and academically.”

Jason Curtis, Masters and PhD in Divinity
Pastor of Sunset Presbyterian Church, Oregon, USA

www.ed.ac.uk/pg/57

Biblical Studies

MTh or MSc 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)

Programme description

This programme is intended for students who wish to develop expertise in biblical studies, including those who wish to prepare for PhD work. The emphasis is on adding depth and breadth to expertise in biblical languages. Finely honed skills in biblical languages are central to this programme's engagement with the Bible, the world that produced it and its later readers. The programme will provide you with expert, in-depth study of the Hebrew Bible and New Testaments, the wider, ancient Near East, and related extra-biblical literature, including the Dead Sea Scrolls and scholarly methods for studying them. You will be taught by leading academics whose research interests are the Hebrew Bible, Old Testament, New Testament, early Judaism and early Christianity. You will benefit from weekly seminars from senior specialists in biblical studies and related subjects, and the School's Centre for the Study of Christian Origins.

Programme structure

This programme is run over one year full-time (or two years part-time). You will be taught mainly in small classroom/seminar groups. You will receive training in research methods and individual supervision for your 15,000-word dissertation.

COMPULSORY COURSES

The core components comprise two biblical language/reading courses, in Greek or Hebrew/Aramaic. There are numerous scenarios for language study chosen in consultation with the Programme Director. If you have only one year previous study of a biblical language you may take Intermediate Biblical Hebrew or Intermediate New Testament Greek.

OPTION COURSES

You may choose two courses from options including: Hebrew and Aramaic Texts from Qumran; Hebrew Scripture Theology; Studies in Ancient Judaism; Textual Criticism in Biblical Studies; The Bible, Literature and Hermeneutics; New Testament Exegesis; Hebrew Bible Exegesis. You can choose another course from the School of Divinity, or from another School at the discretion of the Programme Director, subject to availability.

Career opportunities

The programme is designed to provide a strong foundation for postgraduate research in biblical studies.

Minimum entry requirements

A UK 2:1 degree in theology/religion (with adequate study relevant to biblical studies), or its international equivalent (www.ed.ac.uk/international/country). You are expected to have previously studied at least one of the two main biblical languages (Hebrew or Greek). Any appropriate professional experience will also be considered.

English language requirements

See page 13.

Fees and funding

www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate

For funding information see also page 14.

Programme Director Dr Matthew Novenson
Email matthew.novenson@ed.ac.uk

www.ed.ac.uk/pg/611

Religious Studies

MSc 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)

Programme description

This programme provides the opportunity to study a variety of religious traditions, in combination with advanced learning in the theory and method of the study of religion.

Religious beliefs, behaviours and institutions are fascinating and powerful components in human societies. Understanding their motivations and structures can help the search for solutions to major challenges in the contemporary world.

This programme allows a deepening engagement with the methodological ramifications of the field, while encouraging in-depth study of one or more religious traditions. Our focus extends beyond theory and method in religious studies to specific local, national and international religious traditions. We study Jewish, Christian, Islamic and Indian traditions, as well as indigenous religions of Africa, North America and East Asia, and new age and diasporic traditions. This combination of theoretical know-how with studies in specific traditions equips you to compare, interpret and explain religion in a cross-cultural perspective. The programme also offers the opportunity to learn Sanskrit, Arabic or Persian (subject to availability) through our leading expertise in Asian Studies and in Islamic and Middle Eastern Studies.

Programme structure

This programme is run over one year full-time (or two years part-time). You will participate in seminars, tutorials and lectures. You will be given training in research methods and will receive individual supervision for your 15,000-word dissertation.

COMPULSORY COURSES

Theory and Method in the Study of Religion; Selected Themes in the Study of Religion; Approaches to Research in Divinity and Religious Studies.

OPTION COURSES

Contemporary Theories of Religion; Gender and Ethics in Islam; New Age Spirituality in Contemporary Culture; New Dimensions in Jewish Thought; New Indigenous Religious Movements; Religion and Nationalism; Religion and the New African Diaspora.

You can choose a further postgraduate course offered elsewhere in the School of Divinity, or a course or language from another School, at the discretion of the Programme Director and subject to availability.

Career opportunities

The programme is designed to give you a good basis for postgraduate research in religious studies, or for employment in a wide range of areas requiring critical analysis and empathetic understanding.

Minimum entry requirements

A UK 2:1 degree, or its international equivalent (www.ed.ac.uk/international/country), in humanities or social sciences, including religious studies. Any appropriate experience will also be considered.

English language requirements

See page 13.

Fees and funding

www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate
For funding information see also page 14.

Programme Director Dr Arko Longkumer
Email a.longkumer@ed.ac.uk

www.ed.ac.uk/pg/653

Science & Religion

MSc 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)

Programme description

Our dedicated masters programme in science and religion is intended for students who wish to engage in the advanced interdisciplinary study of science and religion, including those who wish to prepare for subsequent PhD work.

This is one of the world's very few science and religion programmes. Much of the recent debate surrounding 'new atheism' has taken place within a poorly informed view of the history and philosophy of science and its relationship with religion. This programme aims to inform and engage with the debate in depth, looking at it from scientific, philosophical, historical, ethical and theological perspectives. It provides a strong grounding in these issues.

The history of science is studied from ancient times through the modern scientific revolution, together with philosophical trends in our understanding of reality. The main areas of dialogue between science and religion are explored in depth, including cosmology, evolution, divine action and miracles, consciousness and the human person.

Programme structure

This programme is run over one year full-time (or two years part-time). You will be taught mainly in small groups in a seminar setting. You will be given training in research methods and will receive individual supervision for your 15,000-word dissertation.

COMPULSORY COURSES

The History of Science and Religion in the Christian Tradition; Cosmos, Cell and Creator: Current Debates in Science and Religion; Approaches to Research in Divinity and Religious Studies.

OPTION COURSES

You will choose three further courses. Options include: Creation and Providence; Ecology, Ethics and Spirit; Philosophical Issues in Evolution; Man and the Natural World in Enlightenment. You may also choose courses from elsewhere in the University, at the discretion of the Programme Director and subject to availability.

Career opportunities

The programme can be taken as preparation for a research degree, or can form useful preparation for a career in education, journalism, public policy, the civil service or elsewhere.

Minimum entry requirements

A UK 2:1 degree, or its international equivalent (www.ed.ac.uk/international/country), in theology/religion or in a natural or human science.

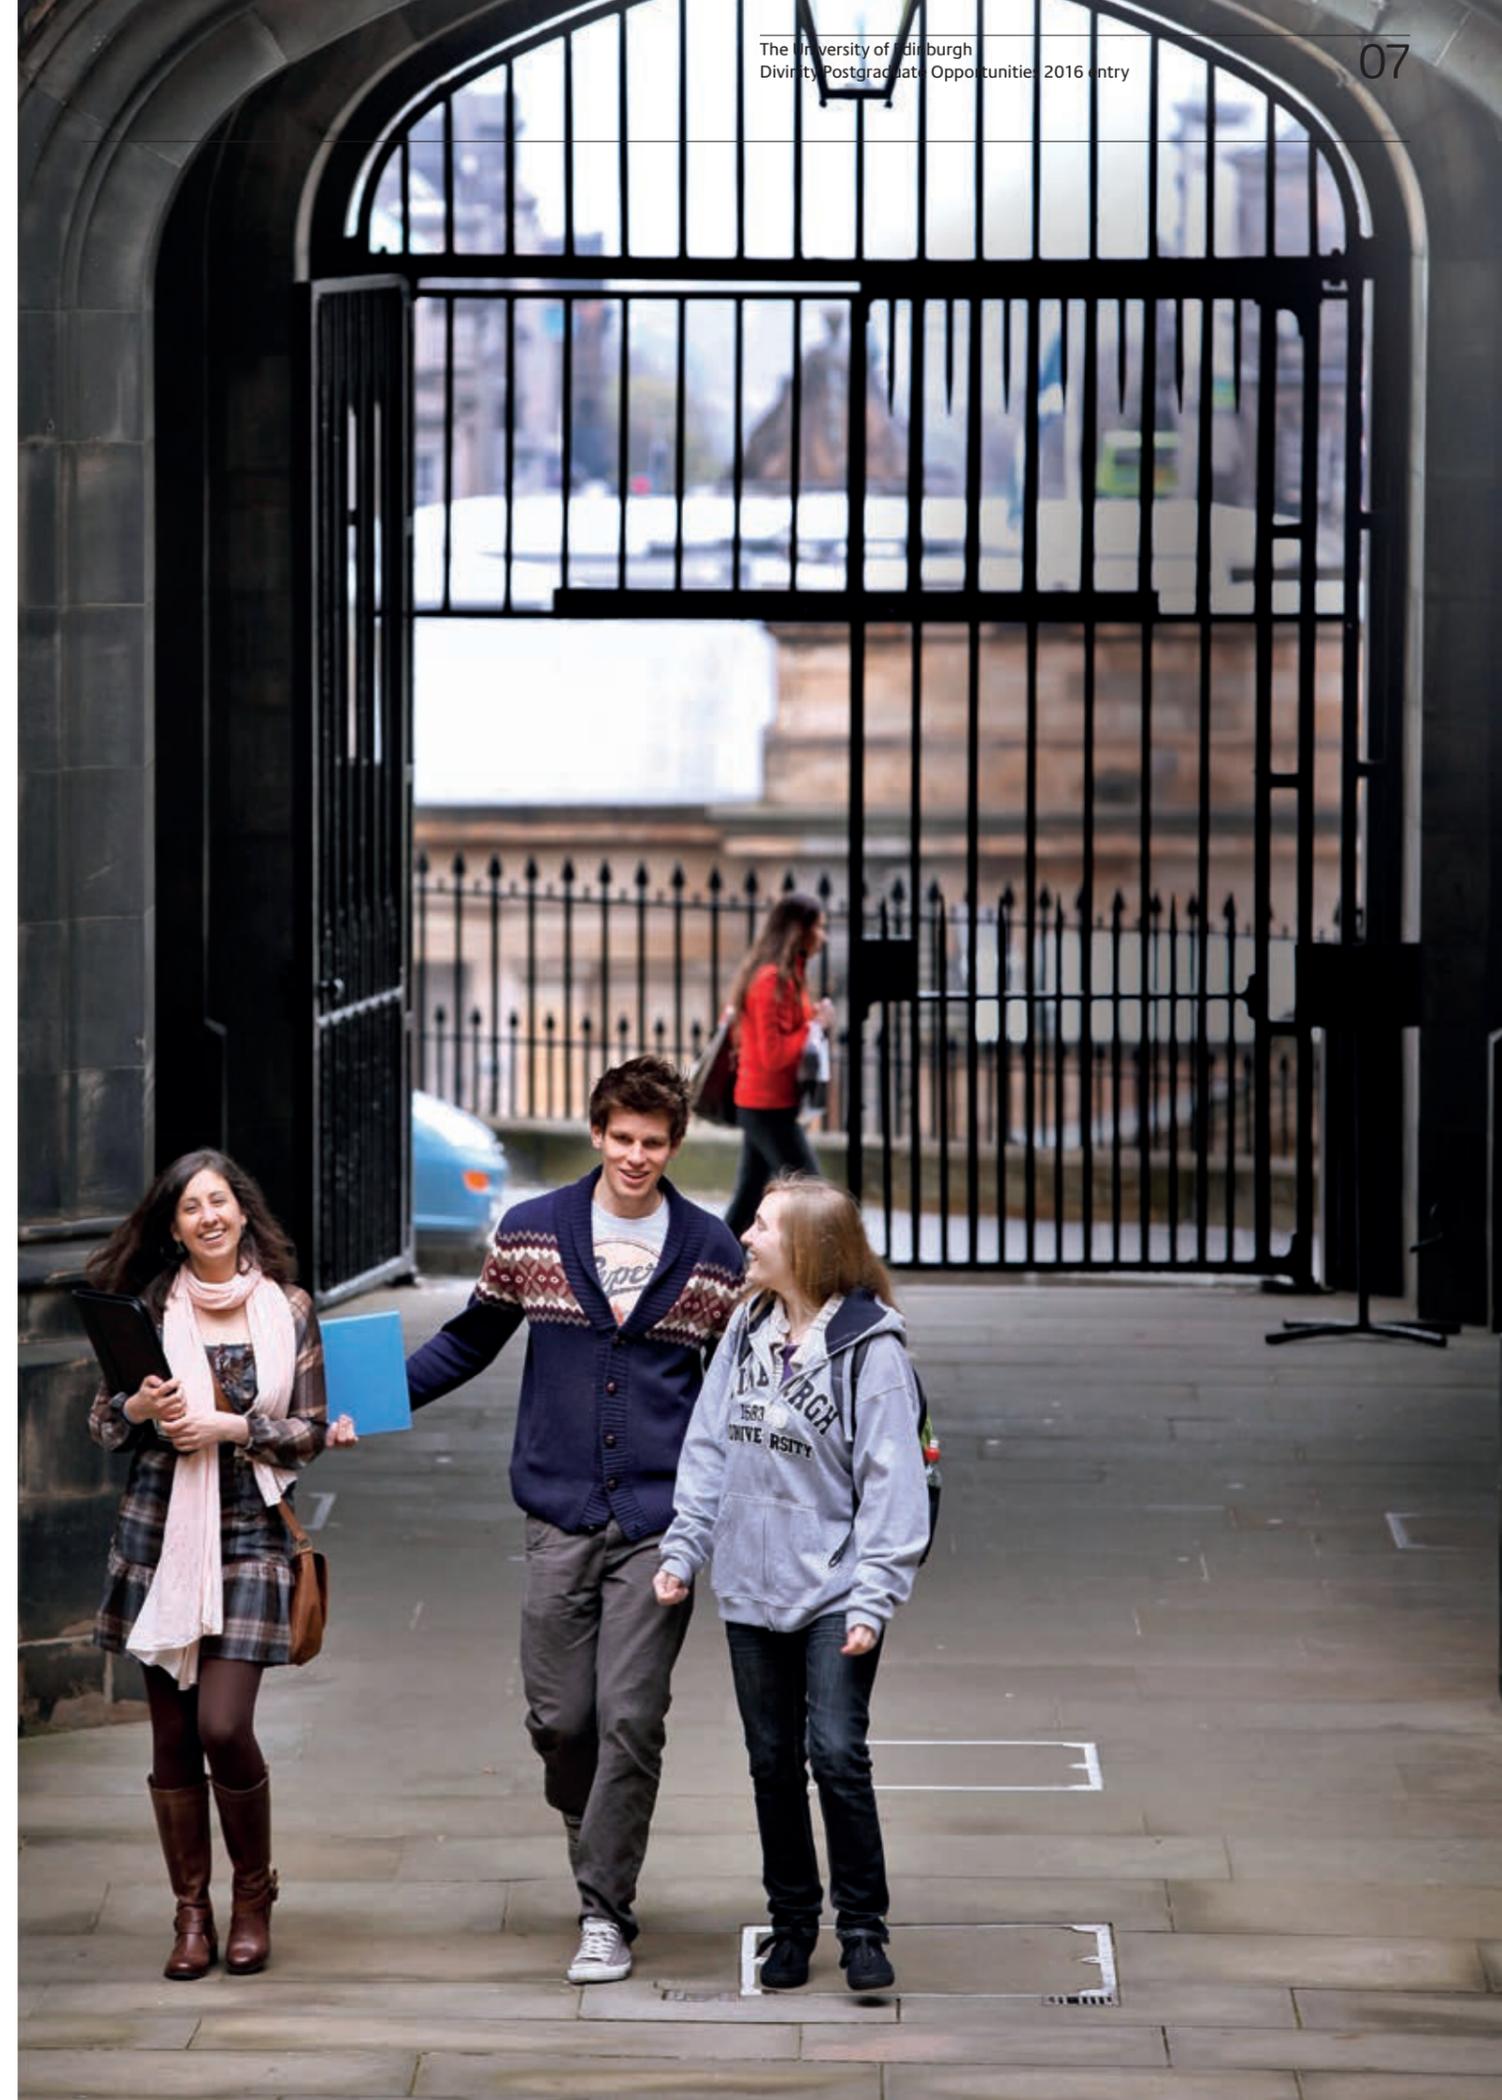

English language requirements

See page 13.

Fees and funding

www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate
For funding information see also page 14.

Programme Director Dr Mark Harris
Email mark.harris@ed.ac.uk

www.ed.ac.uk/pg/61

Theology in History

MTh or MSc 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)

Programme description

This flexible programme looks at the Christian past from a variety of perspectives – theological, philosophical and historical – and provides options for special study of themes from the early church to modern times.

This programme will enable you to understand and reflect critically upon the historical contexts in which Christian thought has developed. Our approach is interdisciplinary: instructors include historians, philosophers of religion and systematic theologians. Our work is enriched by the School's guest lectures and regular research seminars in theology and ethics, and the history of Christianity.

Programme structure

This programme is run over one year full-time (or two years part-time). From September to April you follow courses and are given training in research methods. From April onwards you will work on your 15,000-word dissertation. All students have one-to-one dissertation supervision.

COMPULSORY COURSES

The compulsory courses Creeds, Councils and Controversies I and II focus on the most authoritative ecclesiastical constructions of Christian thought, from the beginnings to the present day, and explore the debates and challenges that have shaped belief and practice. Students also take Approaches to Research, which offers a practical approach to improving postgraduate-level skills of critical thinking and writing.

OPTION COURSES

We offer a wide range of special options in early Christianity, late medieval religion, the Reformation and puritan studies, Scottish theology, German philosophy from Kant to Hegel, modern religious history, and the theology of figures such as Friedrich Schleiermacher and Karl Barth. You may choose at least two of three options from our theology in history offerings, but are also able to take a course from elsewhere within either the School or the College of Humanities & Social Science. You may opt to take a year-long course in an ancient or modern language relevant to your dissertation.

Career opportunities

The programme can be taken as an end in itself or as preparation for a research degree and provides transferable skills which can be applied in a wide range of careers.

Minimum entry requirements

A UK 2:1 degree, or its international equivalent (www.ed.ac.uk/international/country), in theology or history.

English language requirements

See page 13.

Fees and funding

www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate
For funding information see also page 14.

Programme Director Professor Stewart J Brown
Email s.j.brown@ed.ac.uk

www.ed.ac.uk/pg/58

World Christianity

MTh or MSc 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)

Programme description

This programme is designed to enable participants to understand a wide range of Christian belief, culture and practice throughout the world, in historical, theological, and sociological contexts.

With more than 2.2 billion followers, and as one of the oldest religions, Christianity plays an important role in influencing a wide range of social, political and cultural issues. This programme interprets some of the key themes and trends in Christianity in the non-western world, and is designed to provide expert insight, knowledge and skills to understand the wide range of Christian belief, culture and practice throughout the world, particularly in Africa, Latin America and Asia. It is taught in a strongly interdisciplinary way, and employs historical, sociological, anthropological and theological perspectives. You will enjoy a unique framework to study, research and understand the complexity of Christian communities in the world and their wider significance for culture and society.

Programme structure

This programme is run over one year full-time (or two years part-time). You will be taught mainly in small groups in a classroom/seminar setting. You will receive individual supervision for your 15,000-word dissertation.

COMPULSORY COURSES

The compulsory courses, Selected Themes in the Study of World Christianity, and the world Christianity research skills course, attend to methods for the study of indigenous forms and expressions of Christianity, to issues of culture and gender and to changing patterns of relationship between Christianity in the west and other parts of the world. Approaches to Research in Divinity and Religious Studies develops postgraduate-level skills in critical thinking and writing.

OPTION COURSES

You will choose three courses, at least two of which must be postgraduate courses offered by the School of Divinity. Option courses offered by the Centre of World Christianity include: Christianity in Asia, 1700 to the Present; History of Christianity in Africa; Critical Debates in Christian Mission. You can also choose an undergraduate course offered by the School or, at the discretion of the Programme Director, a course from another School, subject to availability.

Career opportunities

The programme forms an excellent basis for postgraduate research in aspects of global Christianity, and provides transferable skills appropriate for a wide range of careers.

Minimum entry requirements

A UK 2:1 degree, or its international equivalent (www.ed.ac.uk/international/country), in an appropriate field. Any professional experience will also be considered.

English language requirements

See page 13.

Fees and funding

www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate
For funding information see also page 14.

Programme Director Professor Brian Stanley
Email brian.stanley@ed.ac.uk

Research at the School of Divinity

The School of Divinity is home to a thriving research community. All of our academic staff are engaged in individual research and writing projects and many are also involved in collaborative projects with colleagues across the globe.

The large graduate school and the presence of visiting academics from around the world help ensure a diverse and stimulating research environment.

All research students are assigned a primary and secondary supervisor. You are offered a training course in research methods, and are given conscientious supervision from your first weeks through to submission of your thesis. There are also special orientation events for international students.

As a postgraduate researcher you can draw on the outstanding library resources of New College, the University of Edinburgh and the nearby National Library of Scotland.

We offer research across: Christian ethics and practical theology; Hebrew and Old Testament studies; history of Christianity; New Testament and Christian origins; Islamic studies; religious studies; science and religion; systematic theology; and world Christianity.

Research collaborations

The School of Divinity has collaborated with Yale University Divinity School since 1992, mounting the annual Yale-Edinburgh conference on the 'History of the Missionary Movement and World Christianity'.

Dr Mark Harris's research in science and religion brings together interdisciplinary links across the University. He collaborates especially with philosophers in the School of Philosophy, Psychology & Language Sciences, and with physicists and biologists in the College of Science & Engineering.

Dr Hannah Holtschneider, senior lecturer in Jewish studies, is lead investigator in a three-year project entitled Jewish Lives, Scottish Spaces, funded by the Arts & Humanities Research Council. The project charts the immigration of Jews to Scotland from 1880 to 1950. The project focuses on the transformation of urban geography through migration, tracing the perception of Glasgow's and Edinburgh's Jewish spaces in the Jewish and Scottish cultural and religious imagination.

The School of Divinity enjoys collaborative links for postgraduate research with Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, and the China Graduate School of Theology in Hong Kong.

We regularly host major lecture series by distinguished international scholars. Professor Linda Woodhead from the University of Lancaster delivered the most recent Croall Lectures, asking 'Is Britain still a Christian country?' Professor Troels Engberg-Pedersen, from the University of Copenhagen, delivered the most recent Gunning Lecture on 'Paul, Stoicism and the Material Spirit'.

Research centres

Our research is based across three centres, founded on a thriving 500-year tradition of creative thought.

Centre for the Study of World Christianity

The Centre for the Study of World Christianity advances high-quality scholarship in Christianity as a polycentric faith, whose adherents are now far more numerous in the southern hemisphere – the majority world – than in Europe or North America. This is the primary postgraduate focus of the Centre. We seek to make a distinctive contribution to scholarly knowledge in all areas of the study of World Christianity through interdisciplinary research, teaching and publication.

Centre for Theology and Public Issues

The Centre for Theology and Public Issues (CTPI) was founded in 1984 as the world's first centre for research on public theology. CTPI promotes inspiring theological reflection on public life. The Centre provides a meeting place for theologians, social scientists, church leaders, policymakers and the broader public.

CTPI has close connections with a wide range of local, national and international groups and organisations. Our recent focus areas include peace building through the media and arts; religion and ethics in the making of war and peace; the Millennium Development Goals and British religious art. The Centre is an active member of the Global Network for Public Theology.

CTPI has hosted numerous conferences and published dozens of books, articles and papers. Subjects worked on include poverty and welfare, justice and the penal system, peace-building and international security, suicide and public health, finance and ethics, national identity, broadcasting, devolution and citizenship.

Centre for the Study of Christian Origins

Established to promote research on the emergence of, and developments in, Christianity in the first three centuries of the Common Era, the Centre for the Study of Christian Origins has brought together researchers from the University of Edinburgh and beyond.

The Centre bridges the study of the New Testament and earliest Christianity and provides a means of linking interested scholars in several traditional disciplines, such as New Testament/Christian origins, patristics, Roman history, archaeology, Second-Temple Judaism and palaeography. The Centre organises a variety of lectures, seminars and conferences.

World view

Some of our PhD students travel overseas in their second year to access libraries or conduct field research.

Research opportunities

We offer two types of research-based masters degree, as well as PhD programmes.

Masters by Research

These one-year masters degrees by research are designed for students with an academic training in divinity or religious studies (or other relevant subject) who wish to focus on a particular topic. The programme may be taken as either a Master of Theology by Research or a Master of Science by Research. The difference is one of nomenclature only. Both involve research training and orientation courses, after which you may either research and submit a dissertation of about 30,000 words, which comprises the remaining assessment for the degree, or write three supervised research essays to provide appropriate background and preparatory study for the topic of your research, and then submit a dissertation of about 15,000 words.

Master of Philosophy (MPhil)

The MPhil requires a minimum of two years' full-time study. You will be provided with two supervisors. During the first year you will explore your chosen area of research and refine your proposal. After nine to 12 months a draft of a chapter or a part-chapter will be submitted for discussion at a Review Board, together with a developed proposal for the whole thesis (of no more than 50,000 words). On the basis of progress-to-date, and the prospects for the research, the Review Board will make a recommendation on the continuation of studies.

Doctor of Philosophy (PhD)

Research towards a PhD requires a minimum of three years' full-time work under the guidance of two supervisors. For PhD study we look for a proven ability to sustain independent research under supervision, normally in the form of a masters degree involving a dissertation. Since in the British model of doctoral studies there is little formal coursework, and the time available is limited to four years, we look for a substantial degree of preparation in any necessary adjunct skills, including languages. Competence in academic writing in English is also essential.

Progress during the first year is assessed by an end-of-year Review Board at which a full, formal research proposal must be presented, along with a sample of work. The Board will make a recommendation based on its reading of your submission and an interview. You then proceed with your research, culminating in your 100,000-word thesis.

Point of Contact

Our Point of Contact peer-support system links incoming and current PhD students.

www.ed.ac.uk/pg/62

Christian Ethics & Practical Theology

PhD 3 yrs FT (6 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MPhil 2 yrs FT (4 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MSc by Research 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MTh by Research 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)

Research profile

The research interests of staff members include theological ethics, social and political ethics, chaplaincy and pastoral studies, homiletics, the ethics of communication (with special reference to the media) and environmental ethics. Both staff and student bodies are ecumenical in composition. There is a research seminar for staff and students to which visiting speakers are invited. Taught courses, at an advanced level, which contribute to your interest and research needs, may be undertaken where available.

English language requirements

See page 13.

Fees and funding

www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate
For funding information see also page 14.

Contact Professor Michael Northcott
Email m.northcott@ed.ac.uk

www.ed.ac.uk/pg/64

Hebrew & Old Testament Studies

PhD 3 yrs FT (6 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MPhil 2 yrs FT (4 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MSc by Research 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MTh by Research 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)

Research profile

We can support most areas of research related to the Hebrew Bible. Current staff are research-active in areas such as pentateuchal and historical studies, poetry and prophecy, biblical theology and ethics, Hebrew language, Septuagint and targumic studies, and the Dead Sea Scrolls in their Hellenistic context. There is a research seminar for staff and students to which visiting speakers are invited. Taught courses, at an advanced level, which contribute to your interest and research needs, may be undertaken where available.

English language requirements

See page 13.

Fees and funding

www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate
For funding information see also page 14.

Contact Professor Timothy Lim
Email limt@ed.ac.uk

www.ed.ac.uk/pg/63

History of Christianity

PhD 3 yrs FT (6 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MPhil 2 yrs FT (4 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MSc by Research 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MTh by Research 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)

Research profile

Within the History of Christianity subject area there is particular research strength in patristics and early Christian history; the Reformation in Britain and on the continent; puritanism; the history of British and European Christianity from the 18th century; and the history of Christian missions, especially in Africa, from the 18th century. There is a research seminar for staff and students to which visiting speakers are invited. Informal reading groups and Latin language classes are also offered.

English language requirements

See page 13.

Fees and funding

www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate
For funding information see also page 14.

Contact Professor Stewart Brown
Email s.j.brown@ed.ac.uk

www.ed.ac.uk/pg/65

New Testament Language, Literature & Theology

PhD 3 yrs FT (6 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MPhil 2 yrs FT (4 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MSc by Research 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MTh by Research 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)

Research profile

Recent staff publications have focused on the gospels; Paul; the apocalypse; the apocryphal gospels and early second-century texts and developments; textual criticism; New Testament ethics; Qumran; the historical, religious and literary environment of the New Testament; and New Testament Christology. Postgraduate research is welcomed in a variety of areas, including exegesis, historical-critical issues, textual and literary criticism, the relation between early Christianity and its religious and historical setting, history of interpretation, and hermeneutical questions. There is a research seminar for staff and students to which visiting speakers are invited. Taught courses, at an advanced level, which contribute to your interest and research needs, may be undertaken where available.

English language requirements

See page 13.

Fees and funding

www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate
For funding information see also page 14.

Contact Dr Helen Bond
Email h.bond@ed.ac.uk

THE UNIVERSITY of EDINBURGH

Case study: Edinburgh's research with impact

Ethics and theology of climate change

Should there be a division between nature and culture, science and ethics? This question and others that probe the moral implications of climate justice form the basis of A Moral Climate: The Ethics of Global Warming. Written by the University of Edinburgh's Michael Northcott, Professor in Ethics at the School of Divinity, the book highlights the moral responsibility of faith communities to adopt exemplary actions that mitigate the impact of human behaviours on the earth's climate.

Project background

Professor Northcott's groundbreaking research addresses the moral implications of climate science: that those who suffer most from growing weather extremes in the less industrialised nations have the least responsibility for their causation, while those who have most benefited from the wealth generated by fossil fuels suffer the least. He argues that the industrialised nations have both the greatest capacity and the greatest duty to mitigate the atmospheric footprint of human development.

Project results

Favourable responses to his arguments within the book led to more than 100 public-speaking invitations to Professor Northcott, on the ethics of climate change, from across the world. His research has mobilised faith communities as sponsors of low-carbon living, renewable energy, local food and other climate change mitigation practices. Professor Northcott's work has reached lay religious as well as scholarly audiences in Australasia, Europe, North America and south-east Asia. A Benedictine Monastery in the south of England uses it for readings at mealtimes and UK churches associated with the 'Eco-Congregations' movement have adopted the book for home-group study. It has also been taken up as a classroom text in the study of ecology and religion in higher education institutions across the USA and UK.

Professor Northcott's work has reached lay religious as well as scholarly audiences in Australasia, Europe, North America and south-east Asia.

See more online: www.ed.ac.uk/research/impact

www.ed.ac.uk/pg/66

Religious Studies

PhD 3 yrs FT (6 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MPhil 2 yrs FT (4 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MSc by Research 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MTh by Research 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)

Research profile

The interests of staff in religious studies include Islam, contemporary Judaism, indigenous religions (Africa and the Arctic), south Asian and south-east Asian traditions, and new age religions. The methodologies supported include phenomenology, anthropology and cultural studies. There is a regular religious studies research seminar, for both students and staff, to which postgraduates regularly contribute work-in-progress papers, and at which research students, staff, and visiting academics present special lectures.

English language requirements

See page 13.

Fees and funding

www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate

For funding information see also page 14.

Contact Dr Steven Sutcliffe

Email s.sutcliffe@ed.ac.uk

www.ed.ac.uk/pg/67

Systematic Theology

PhD 3 yrs FT (6 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MPhil 2 yrs FT (4 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MSc by Research 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MTh by Research 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)

Research profile

Research students currently work in most areas of systematic theology from the patristic era to the medieval era; from the Reformation to modern times; and in philosophical theology, from the early modern period to recent continental thought; and in such specialised topics as modern Christology; theology and science; and theological ethics, all of which represent prominent research interests of current members of staff. Sessions on research methods are offered to all students. Within systematic theology, there is a research seminar for staff and students to which visiting speakers are invited. Informal reading groups and language classes in theological German are also offered.

English language requirements

See page 13.

Fees and funding

www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate

For funding information see also page 14.

Contact Professor David Fergusson

Email david.fergusson@ed.ac.uk

www.ed.ac.uk/pg/68

World Christianity

PhD 3 yrs FT (6 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MPhil 2 yrs FT (4 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MSc by Research 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)
MTh by Research 1 yr FT (2 yrs PT available for UK/EU students)

Research profile

Staff associated with the Centre for World Christianity cover a number of different academic disciplines, including theology, history, mission studies, religious studies and anthropology. They also have geographical expertise in Africa, Asia and Latin America, allowing for a wide range of research possibilities. The Centre provides a weekly seminar programme for PhD students in World Christianity.

English language requirements

See page 13.

Fees and funding

www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate

For funding information see also page 14.

Contact Professor Brian Stanley

Email brian.stanley@ed.ac.uk

See also...

You may also be interested in research areas offered by other Schools, particularly the Schools of History, Classics & Archeology; Literatures, Languages & Cultures; Philosophy, Psychology & Language Sciences; and Social & Political Science.

www.ed.ac.uk/studying/prospectus-request

How to apply

We have an online application process for all postgraduate programmes. It's a straightforward system with full instructions, including details of any supporting documentation you need to submit.

When applying, you will set up an account, which lets you save your application and continue at another time.

Full guidance on our application system is available at: www.ed.ac.uk/postgraduate/applying

General requirements

Our usual entrance requirement for postgraduate study is a UK 2:1 degree, or its international equivalent (see www.ed.ac.uk/international/country), in a subject related to your chosen programme. School of Divinity PhD applicants typically require a specialist postgraduate degree beyond their first degree.

You will also need to meet the University's language requirements (see right).

Entry requirements for individual programmes can vary, so check the details for the specific programme you wish to apply for.

References

For applications to taught programmes, the normal requirement is one reference, although an additional reference may be requested in individual cases. For applications to research programmes, two references are required. You should check the entry online for exact requirements for your intended programme of study. For general guidance on references, visit: www.ed.ac.uk/postgraduate/references

Taught programmes

Deadlines

Some programmes have application deadlines. Please check the programme entry online for details. For all other programmes, you are encouraged to apply no later than one month prior to entry to ensure there is sufficient time to process your application. However, earlier application is recommended, particularly where there is a high demand for places or when a visa will be required. Should you wish to submit a late application, please contact us for guidance. However, if you wish to be considered for a financial award for admission in September, you should complete your application by the end of March as funds are normally awarded by the end of April. School of Divinity funding applications are made at the same time as your academic application, while other financial awards require a separate application.

Procedure

- Thoroughly explore this prospectus and our website to identify your preferred programme of study. You are welcome to contact the School to discuss your choice. See Get in touch, page 17.
- Check you meet all entry requirements. Check whether a separate application is needed for funding. Check any deadlines.
- Visit www.ed.ac.uk/pg/degrees, navigate to your chosen programme, and click on Apply. Follow the instructions within the online application system.

Research programmes

Deadlines

Applications are considered the whole year round, but the deadline for consideration for our financial awards is the end of January. Further rounds of funding allocation for certain awards may take place throughout the spring. You should continue to register your interest in an award if you wish to be considered.

Procedure

- Thoroughly explore this prospectus and our website to identify the research area that matches your interests.
- Check you meet all entry requirements. Check whether a separate application is needed for funding. Check any deadlines.
- We strongly encourage you to contact a potential supervisor to discuss your research interests before making your formal application, and you will often be asked to submit a draft research proposal. Information on staff and their research interests is available at: www.ed.ac.uk/schools-departments/divinity/staff
- Visit www.ed.ac.uk/pg/degrees, navigate to your chosen programme, and click on Apply. Follow the instructions within the online application system.

Joining us from overseas

International applicants are advised to check the University's website to find out more about their visa options and our Integrated English for Academic Purposes (IEAP) programme. For more information, visit: www.ed.ac.uk/international/ieap

International agents

The University has certified representative agents in the following locations: Brunei, Canada, China, Gulf Region, Hong Kong, India, Japan, Jordan, Korea, Malaysia, Mexico, Nigeria, Norway, Russia, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, South Africa, South Korea, Taiwan, Thailand, Turkey, Zambia and Zimbabwe. International applicants can use an agent to help guide them through the application process if necessary. For more information, visit: www.ed.ac.uk/international/country

English language requirements

Students whose first language is not English must show evidence of one of the qualifications below.

- IELTS: total 7.0 (at least 6.0 in each module).
- TOEFL-iBT: total 100 (at least 20 in each module).
- PTE(A): total 67 (at least 56 in each of the Communicative Skills sections).
- CAE and CPE: total 185 (at least 169 in each module).

Please note:

- English language requirements can be affected by government policy so please ensure you visit our degree finder to check the latest requirements for your programme: www.ed.ac.uk/pg/degrees
- Your English language certificate must be no more than two years old at the beginning of your programme.
- We also accept recent degree-level study that was taught and assessed in English in a majority English speaking country (as defined by UK Visas & Immigration).

Abbreviations: IELTS – International English Language Testing System; TOEFL-iBT – Test of English as a Foreign Language Internet-Based Test; PTE(A) – Pearson Test of English (Academic); CPE – Certificate of Proficiency in English; CAE – Certificate in Advanced English.

www.ed.ac.uk/english-requirements/pg

Funding

A large number of scholarships, loans and other funding schemes are available for your postgraduate studies. It is only possible to show a small selection in print. To see the full range, please visit: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate.

Awards are offered by the School of Divinity, the College of Humanities & Social Science, the University of Edinburgh, the Scottish, UK and international governments and many funding bodies.

Here we list a selection of potential sources of financial support for postgraduate students applying to the School of Divinity. Others are listed online (see above) in the School's annual funding guide.

Tuition fee discounts

We offer a 10 per cent discount on postgraduate fees for all alumni who have graduated with an undergraduate degree from the University. We also offer a 10 per cent discount for international graduates who spent at least one semester at the University of Edinburgh as a visiting undergraduate: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/discounts

Key

- Taught masters programmes
- Masters by Research programmes
- Research programmes

Loans available for study at the University of Edinburgh

The University of Edinburgh is a participating institution in the following loans programmes, meaning we certify your student status and can help with the application process.

• The Canada Student Loans Program ●●●

The University is eligible to certify Canadian student loan applications: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/canadian-loans

• The Student Awards Agency Scotland ●●

The Student Awards Agency Scotland offers eligible students postgraduate tuition fee loans for eligible programmes: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/pg-loan

• US Student Loans ●●●

The University is eligible to certify loan applications for US loan students. Full details on eligibility and how to apply can be found online: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/us-loans

Research council awards

Research councils offer awards to masters, MPhil and PhD students in most of the Schools within the University of Edinburgh. All studentship applications from the research councils must be made through the University, through your School or College office. Awards can be made for both taught and research programmes.

Normally only those UK/EU students who have been resident in the UK for the preceding three years are eligible for a full award. For some awards, candidates who are EU nationals and are resident in the UK may be eligible for a fees-only award. www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/research-councils

University of Edinburgh scholarships

The University offers a number of scholarships in partnership with the following overseas government agencies:

• Chile ●●●

National Commission for Scientific and Technological Research (CONICYT): www.conicyt.cl

• Colombia ●

Administrative Department of Science, Technology and Innovation (Colciencias): www.colciencias.gov.co

• Ecuador ●●●

Secretaria Nacional de Educacion Superior, Ciencia y Tecnologia (SENESCYT): www.educacionsuperior.gob.ec

• Iraq ●

Ministry of Higher Education and Scientific Research: www.en.mohe.gov.iq/

• Mexico

National Council of Science and Technology of the United Mexican States (CONACYT): ●●● www.conacyt.mx

Banco de Mexico and the Banco de Mexico's FIDERH trust (FIDERH): ●●● www.fiderh.org.mx

Fundacion Mexicana para la Educacion, la Tecnologia y la Ciencia (FUNED): ●● www.funedx.org

Other scholarship opportunities include:

• China Scholarships Council/University of Edinburgh Scholarships (China) ●

A number of scholarships for PhD study to candidates who are citizens and residents of China: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/china-council

• College of Humanities & Social Science Studentships and Scholarships ●

Studentships and scholarships are open to those admitted to the first year of PhD research: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/research-hss

• The Desmond Tutu Masters Scholarship (Africa) ●●

One scholarship will be awarded to a student from Africa on a full-time masters programme in the School of Divinity: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/tutu

• Edinburgh Global Masters Scholarships ●●

A number of scholarships are available to international students for masters study: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/masters

• Edinburgh Global Research Scholarships ●

These scholarships are designed to attract high-quality international research students to the University: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/global-research

• Eric Liddell China Saltire Scholarships (China) ●●

Ten scholarships are available to Chinese citizens who are permanent residents of mainland China who are accepted on a full-time masters degree programme: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/liddell

• Julius Nyerere Masters Scholarship (Tanzania) ●●

One scholarship is available to citizens of Tanzania who are normally resident in Tanzania who are accepted on a full-time masters degree programme: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/nyerere

• The Reverend Dr Norma P Robertson Scholarships ●●●

At least one award available for postgraduate study in Christian History, Bible and Theology: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/robertson

• School of Divinity Postgraduate Scholarships ●●●

Competition is open to all applicants on the basis of academic merit. All applicants must have been accepted for study towards a postgraduate degree: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate/international/humanities/divinity/school-scholarships

• Southern African Scholarship ●●●

One award for masters study available to students from selected southern African countries: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/postgraduate/southern-africa

• TF Torrance Scholarships ●●

Scholarships are available to students accepted on a full-time one-year MTh degree in the School of Divinity. Applicants should be citizens or a resident of the 'Global South': www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/torrance

• UK/EU Masters Scholarships ●●

A number of scholarships for UK and EU students who have been accepted on a full-time masters degree programme: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/uk-masters

• University of Edinburgh PhD Scholarships ●

A number of scholarships, open to UK, EU and international PhD students: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/development

Other sources of funding

The following are examples of the many scholarships and support schemes available to students from particular countries who meet certain eligibility criteria.

• Beit Trust ●●●

Beit Trust Scholarships support postgraduate students from Malawi, Zambia and Zimbabwe, usually to undertake a masters degree: www.beittrust.org.uk

• Chevening Scholarships ●●

A number of partial and full funding scholarships are available to one-year masters students: www.chevening.org

• Commonwealth Scholarships ●●●

Scholarships available to students who are resident in any Commonwealth country, other than the UK: www.dfid.gov.uk/csck

• Fulbright Scholarships (USA) ●●●

Scholarships open to US graduate students in any subject wishing to study in the UK: www.iie.org/fulbright

• Marshall Scholarships (USA) ●●●

Scholarships available to outstanding US students wishing to study at any UK university for at least two years: www.marshallsscholarship.org

• Scotland's Saltire Scholarships ●●

A number of scholarships open to students who are citizens permanently and ordinarily resident in Canada, China, India and the USA for one year of masters study: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/saltire

• Silber Bequest ●●●

Funding is available to help prospective postgraduate students living in the UK who have been granted refugee status: www.ed.ac.uk/student-funding/silber

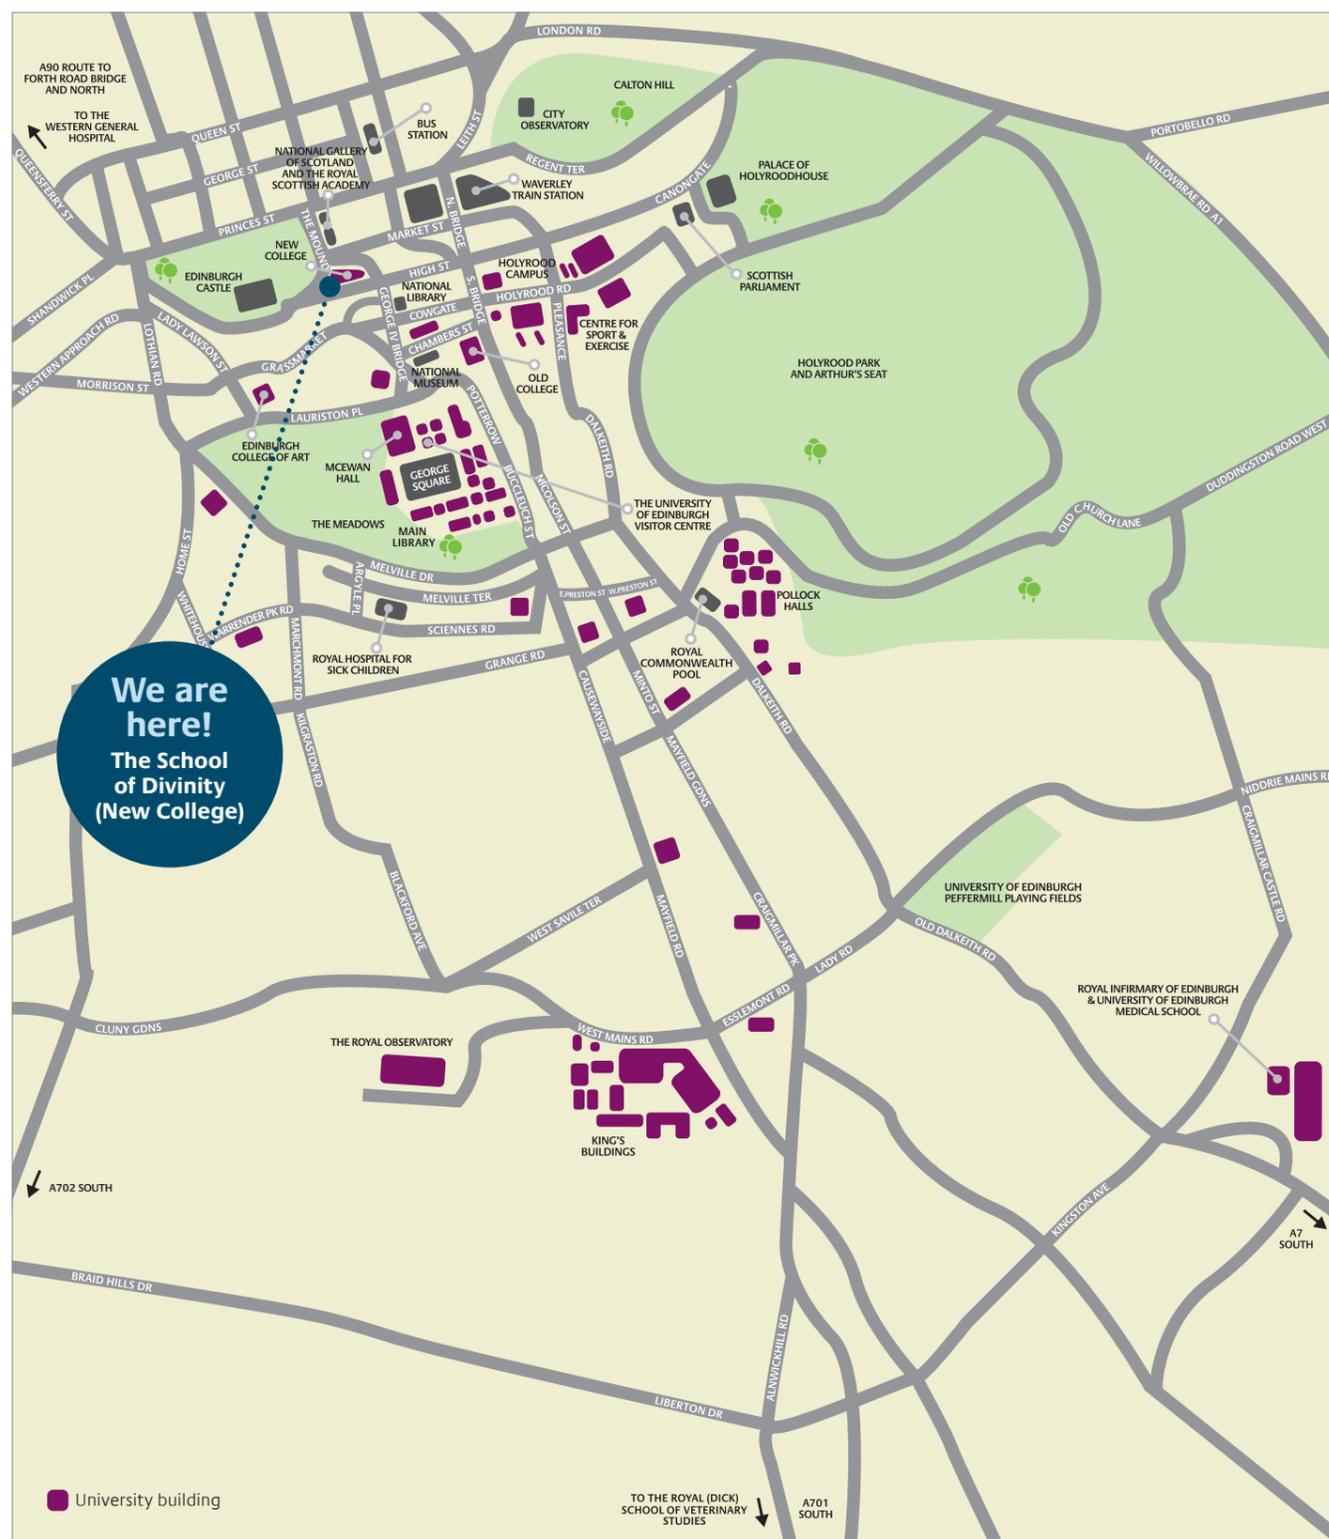

“The scholarships have provided me with a wonderful opportunity to study at a premier institution. I wish to work in academia in the future and so my PhD will provide me with the necessary training and qualification to allow me to meet my goals.”

Shruti Chaudhry, PhD Sociology, Edinburgh Global Research Scholarship and College of Humanities & Social Science Research Studentship

Campus map

The School of Divinity's home, New College, has an unrivalled location at the top of the Mound, overlooking one of the most scenic cities in the world. We are a few minutes' walk from the University's Central Area campus, and close to all city centre amenities.

Detailed maps can be found at:
www.ed.ac.uk/maps

Get in touch

Contact us

For more information about postgraduate studies at the School of Divinity please get in touch.

School of Divinity
New College
Mound Place
Edinburgh, UK
EH1 2LX
Tel +44 (0)131 650 8952
Email divinity.pg@ed.ac.uk
www.ed.ac.uk/divinity

To make contact with a potential PhD supervisor please see our staff profiles and contact information at: www.ed.ac.uk/schools-departments/divinity/staff-profiles

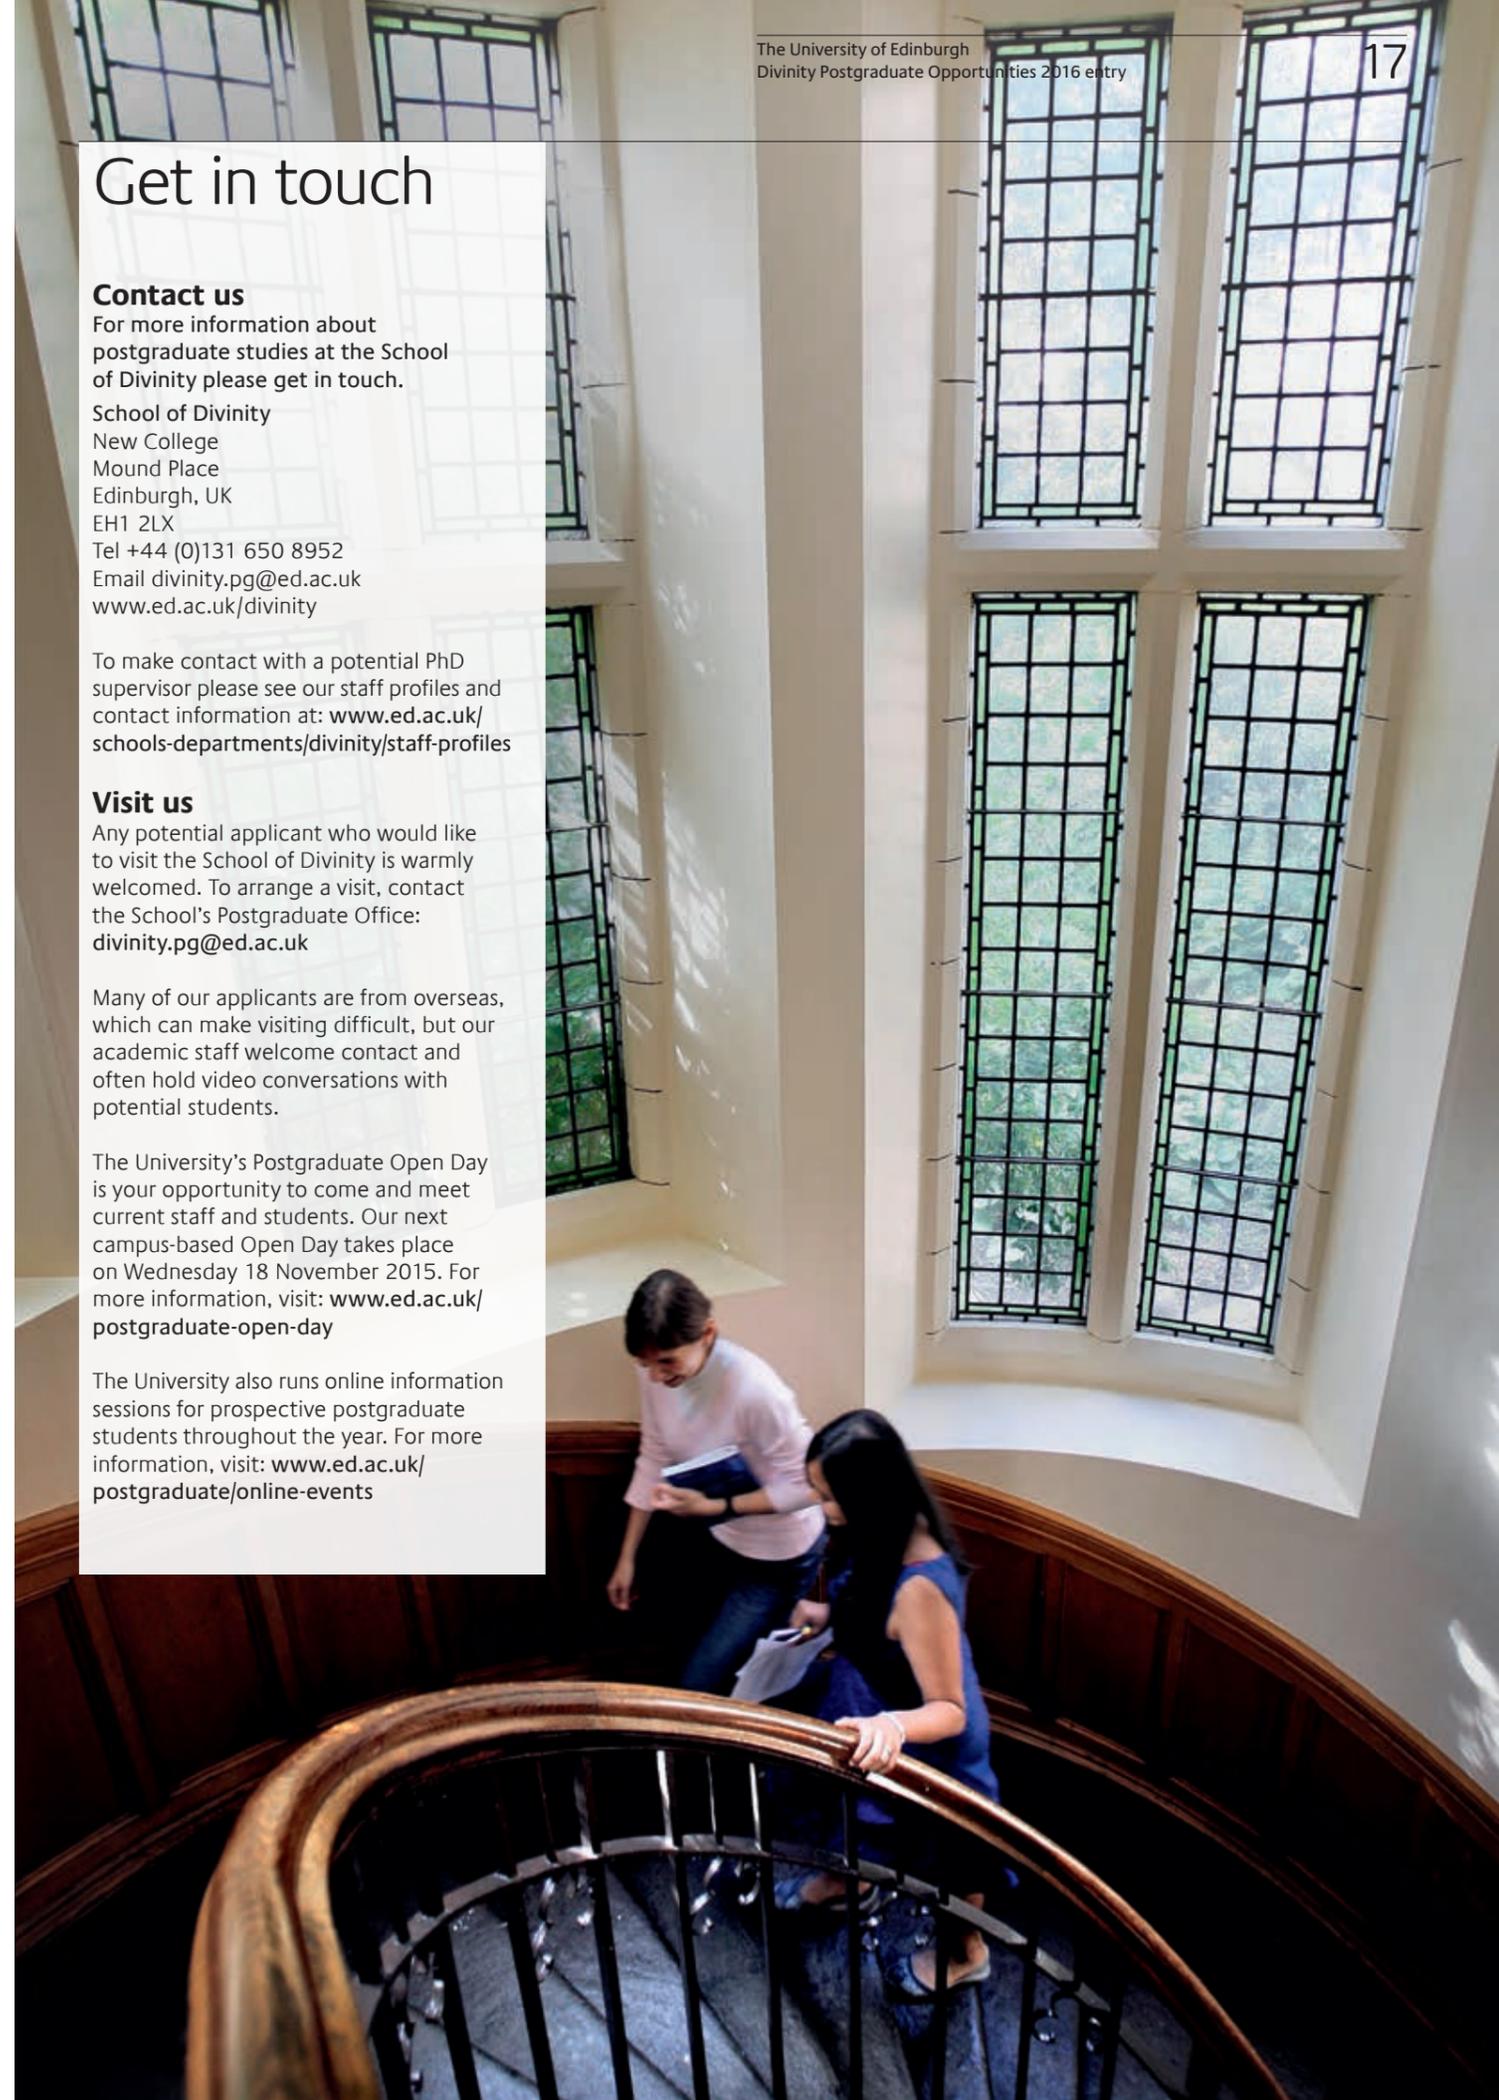

Visit us

Any potential applicant who would like to visit the School of Divinity is warmly welcomed. To arrange a visit, contact the School's Postgraduate Office: divinity.pg@ed.ac.uk

Many of our applicants are from overseas, which can make visiting difficult, but our academic staff welcome contact and often hold video conversations with potential students.

The University's Postgraduate Open Day is your opportunity to come and meet current staff and students. Our next campus-based Open Day takes place on Wednesday 18 November 2015. For more information, visit: www.ed.ac.uk/postgraduate-open-day

The University also runs online information sessions for prospective postgraduate students throughout the year. For more information, visit: www.ed.ac.uk/postgraduate/online-events

18 Nov 2015

Postgraduate Open Day

[www.ed.ac.uk/
postgraduate-open-day](http://www.ed.ac.uk/postgraduate-open-day)

Published by:

Communications and Marketing,
The University of Edinburgh

Designed by:

Tayburn

Photography by:

Paul Dodds
Edinburgh Inspiring Capital
Yao Hui
Tricia Malley & Ross Gillespie
Shutterstock
Laurence Winram

Printed by:

Sterling

Printed on Amadeus 50% recycled silk: a recycled paper containing 50% recycled waste and 50% virgin fibre. Manufactured at a mill certified with ISO 14001 environmental management standard. The pulp used in this product is bleached using an Elemental Chlorine Free process.

We have made every effort to ensure the accuracy of the information in this prospectus before going to print. However please check online for the most up-to-date information: www.ed.ac.uk

The University's standard terms and conditions will form an essential part of any contract between the University of Edinburgh and any student offered a place here. Our full terms and conditions are available online: www.ed.ac.uk/student-recruitment/terms-conditions

© The University of Edinburgh 2015.

No part of this publication may be reproduced without written permission of the University.

The University of Edinburgh is a charitable body registered in Scotland, with registration number SC005336.

This publication is available online at www.ed.ac.uk/studying/prospectus-request and can be made available in alternative formats on request. Please contact communications.office@ed.ac.uk or call +44 (0)131 650 2252.