

2018 Sustainability Awards

The Sustainability Awards encourage and recognise the efforts of staff, students and departments* to make our University more socially responsible and sustainable.

Every year, teams find new ways to conserve resources, save energy, fund-raise for good causes and promote healthier working lives.

There are five Awards categories in total. Each category is tailored to suit a part of the University.

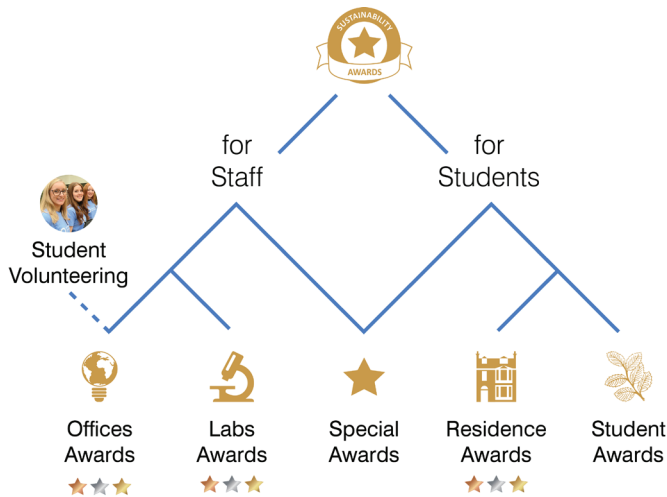

You'll find more information about each category and how to get involved on the other side of this leaflet.

*or offices, labs, buildings, research centres, schools, campuses, residences, halls, etc!

What's involved?

To earn an Award, teams must typically meet a number of criteria across a range of social responsibility and sustainability themes.

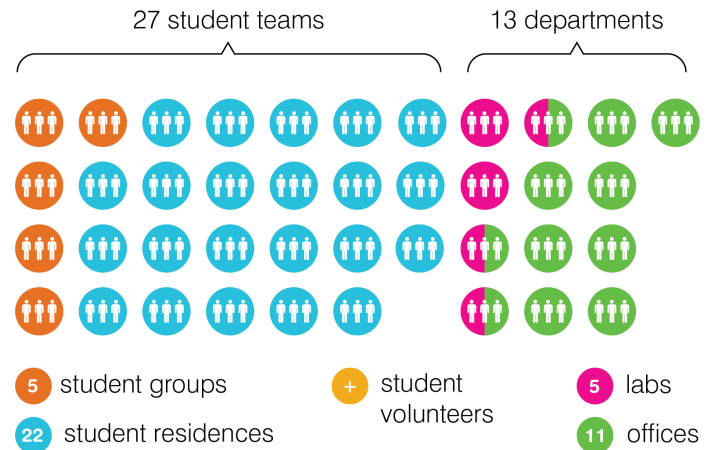

At the end of the year, participants provide evidence and are audited by our Department. Successful teams receive a locally-crafted award at our annual Sustainability Awards Ceremony.

Why participate?

You'll be part of a growing community of people who are making a difference at our University.

When the Sustainability Awards were launched in 2010, 11 teams signed up. In 2017, 40 teams were involved!

There are many other reasons to participate:

- Staff and students gain new skills
- Departments adopt good practices and demonstrate a strategic commitment to sustainability
- Teams have access to training and support from our Department throughout the year
- Winners receive recognition from senior members of the University

Sustainability is an essential aspiration for the University and can also save a lot of money but the big surprise for us was how much fun it all was.

Interested in taking part?

Practically anyone can participate in the Sustainability Awards. Start by registering your interest at the website below. A member of our Department will be in touch shortly with more information.

Those interested in the awards don't need to get their whole department or building involved before signing up. We will be able to link you with a team in your area if one already exists.
