Why study for an MSc in Conflict, Security and Development?

What type of issues are you interested in?

- The intersection of conflict with key development issues such as poverty, governance and democracy
- The relationships between local security needs and grand politics
- The relationships between multi-level actors of security
- The systems that govern all these

What type of students are we looking for?

- Curious and passionate about the world and the people left behind in it
- Interested in making policy that can shape security outcomes
- Interested in understanding why conflicts happen, how they play out, what actors are involved and how to end them
