Lectureship in Theoretical Syntax
Department of Linguistics and English Language
Grade: UE08

Closing date: 20th March 2024 @ 23.59 (GMT)
Interview Date: Mid - April 2024
Requisition number: 9738
The University seeks to appoint an open-ended, full time Lecturer in Theoretical Syntax, within the department of Linguistics and English Language in the School of Philosophy, Psychology and Language Sciences.

The successful candidate will be expected to maintain and develop the School’s current research and teaching profile in theoretical syntax, and to build links to other related strengths in the University, possibly including syntax and its interfaces with semantics, pragmatics, and morphophonology; acquisition of syntax; sentence processing; grammar change; linguistic fieldwork; computational models of syntax; and language evolution.

The successful candidate will be expected to have an excellent publication record for their career stage, and to demonstrate potential for attracting external grant funding. The potential to make a significant contribution to the teaching and research culture of the School is essential. The successful candidate will offer courses at both UG and MSc level and will be expected to supervise and recruit PhD students.

As part of the application process, please include the following PDFs: (1) full CV, (2) cover letter, (3) research statement (max two pages) and (4) teaching statement (max two pages) including an indication of courses you would like to teach, which need not be courses already in our programmes. Please do not attach any further PDFs.

Interviews are expected to be held at some point during mid April 2024 and short-listed candidates will be required to give two brief presentations on their research and teaching over a two day interview process at our Edinburgh campus. We will aim to give shortlisted candidates at least two weeks notice of the interview date.

It is our intention to provide candidates’ CVs to members of the faculty attending these presentations unless an objection is received from the candidate.

Applications can be made via our University vacancy pages. Supporting information relating to how to use the recruitment portal can be found at the back of this pack. The department of LEL particularly welcomes applications from eligible candidates from under-represented groups, including racially minoritised individuals and all gender identities.

For more information on our family-friendly policies please visit our HR web pages.
Job Description

Salary: Lectureship UE08 (£45,585 - £54,395)

(a revised salary range for this grade of £48,350 to £59,421 is planned to take effect from Spring 2024)

Hours of Work: 35 hours a week

Contract type: Open-ended

Location: Dugald Stewart Building, 3 Charles Street, Edinburgh

---

Job Purpose

The postholder will conduct research in, and contribute teaching in theoretical syntax and related areas at all levels of the undergraduate and Masters curriculum.

They will engage in research of the highest quality, and will contribute to the development and maintenance of Linguistics and English Language as one of the most highly regarded linguistics departments in the world.

They will be expected to supervise and recruit PhD students working in their area of research.

They will also be expected to develop internal and external collaborations and to demonstrate potential for attracting external grant funding.

Normal teaching and administrative duties are also included.

Main Responsibilities

1. Research (approx. 40% of the time)

The successful candidate is expected to contribute to the research objectives of the Subject area and the School. The candidate will be expected to:

(a) Contribute to the research culture of the subject area, by pursuing an internationally significant independent research programme in theoretical syntax that leads to regular publication and presentation in high-profile peer-reviewed venues and to successful applications for external funding.

(b) Represent the work of the University in the field locally, nationally and internationally in relevant networks and/or in public activities.

2. Teaching (approx. 40% of the time)

The successful candidate is expected to contribute to the teaching objectives of the Subject area and the School. The candidate will be expected to:

(a) Teach at all levels, ranging from foundational to advanced topics in theoretical syntax, and also more broadly within the field of Linguistics and English Language as necessary. Teaching duties may include the delivery of lectures and small group tutorials, the development of assessments, and the supervision of undergraduate and postgraduate projects and dissertations. The postholder will be expected to provide high quality assessment feedback in a timely fashion.

(b) Apply knowledge derived from research to teaching in theoretical syntax, including the supervision and recruitment of PhD students.

(c) Take responsibility for the design and development of courses and/or course units as required, and contribute to maintaining the quality of teaching within the subject area.

(d) Provide training and guidance, where appropriate, for postgraduate tutors.

3. Leadership and administration (approx. 20%)

Undertake further leadership and administrative duties, as specified by the Head of School or Head of Subject Area.
Planning and Organising

- Assume responsibility for own time management.
- Plan own research and use of resources, including applications for external funding.
- Supervise PhD students through regular meetings and other activities as required.
- Organise activities associated with any administrative role carried out on behalf of the Subject Area or School.

Problem Solving

- Solve problems relating to own research, including seeking out appropriate external resources.
- Respond to student feedback on teaching and assessment through changes in course design and course content as appropriate.
- Develop appropriate responses to problems or issues that arise in respect of administrative roles.

Decision Making

- Decide on own work priorities and effectively manage conflicting demands on time. This may involve consultation with key School contacts such as Head of Subject Area or Head of School as appropriate.
- Decide on an appropriate research strategy and on how best to implement this, including selecting appropriate means and output locations for publishing research findings and deciding on how best to seek out external funding.
- Decide on the best way to deal with student queries and feedback, including deciding on when to approach other key School contacts for further support.

Key Contacts and Relationships

- UG and PG students.
- Academic colleagues within the subject area.
- Head of Subject Area.
- Head of School.
- Professional Services staff across the school.
- Other College/University representatives.
- External contacts such as organisers of research conferences, representatives of learned societies or other professional organisations, representatives of research funding bodies.

Edinburgh has a lively department of Linguistics and English Language with world-leading research and an enthusiastic and supportive teaching culture. We house 40+ academic staff who cover a wide range of topics from the early history of English to speech synthesis.

Linguistics at Edinburgh ranks 4th in the world and 2nd in the UK (QS World University Rankings by Subject 2023).

English Language (and Literature) ranks 9th in the world and 3rd in UK (QS World University Rankings by Subject 2023).

With 95 researchers, Edinburgh Modern Languages and Linguistics research is ranked 3rd in the UK by Times Higher Education (THE) in terms of quality and breadth.

We have three research centres: the Angus McIntosh Centre for Historical Linguistics, Centre for Speech Technology Research, and the Centre for Language Evolution. We are also the founders of Bilingualism Matters, a centre for public engagement, which has 28 branches across Europe and the US. Along with Informatics, Linguistics and English Language is a founder member of the University’s Centre for Speech Technology Research.

Our research specialisms range from syntax, semantics, pragmatics, morphology, phonetics, and phonology to language and identity, variationist sociolinguistics, the linguistics of English, language evolution, language acquisition and development, and language change.

We have a well-established and large PhD programme, with many of our PhD graduates going on to successful academic careers. We also offer eight taught MSc programmes and an MSc by Research. Each year, our graduate students organise the Linguistics and English Language Postgraduate Conference, an international event which has run for over 20 years. The department has access to fully-equipped facilities for EEG/ERP and eye-tracking research, and a state-of-the-art recording studio.

Undergraduate teaching, which draws on our well-established research strengths, ranges from first year classes of around 290 students (including a first year intake onto Linguistics or English Language single and joint honours degree programmes of around 150 students) to some 60 students who choose to write their undergraduate dissertations with us. The Linguistics and English Language student society, LingSoc, runs a lively programme of talks and events and is the host of the 2018 conference for Undergraduate Linguistics Association of Britain (ULAB).

Linguistics and English Language has close ties with Psychology and Philosophy, the other two areas within its home School; beyond the School, the department has links with Edinburgh's renowned Schools of Education and Informatics.

As well as our single honours degrees, we offer a wide range of joint honours degrees with subjects including English Literature, Philosophy, Psychology, Social Anthropology and Modern Languages.

Our teaching is well-regarded by students and external examiners, and we achieved high student satisfaction, with 100 per cent of students finding the MA Linguistics programme intellectually stimulating (NSS 2017).

For further information please visit our departmental web page: www.lel.ed.ac.uk
The School comprises Philosophy, Psychology, and Language Sciences. We offer a rich and diverse learning and research environment for our staff and students, with close links between our three subject areas, alongside other world-class research areas within the University and beyond. All three of the School's subjects are world-leading—they each rank in the top 5 in the UK and in the top 25 in the world (the THE World University Rankings 2024 by subject results).

In all subject areas the School is recognised as world-leading, as shown in its high rankings across all areas in the THE ranking by subject of the latest Research Excellence Framework (REF 2021).

As part of the wider University of Edinburgh 2021 REF submission, PPLS submitted (either singularly, or in conjunction with other schools) to three, subject-based, units of assessment: UoA4 – Psychology, Psychiatry, and Neuroscience; UoA26 – Modern Languages and Linguistics; and UoA30 – Philosophy.

The breadth and quality of PPLS's submissions, when compared to other UK universities, has resulted in:

- Psychology, Psychiatry, and Neuroscience ranked 3rd in UK;
- Modern Languages and Linguistics ranked 3rd in UK;
- Philosophy ranked 4th in the UK.

All subject areas have active links with research organizations outwith the University, and a broad network of collaboration with a range of universities around the globe. The School offers extensive support for academics, including dedicated undergraduate and postgraduate teaching offices, research and knowledge exchange support team and IT resources team.

The School facilities include a range of specialist laboratories and a well-stocked and resourced School library which is supported by a full-time librarian. This is in addition to the nearby University central library. The School is located across two buildings set in the heart of the University’s George Square campus.

The School is unique in offering outstanding opportunities for interdisciplinary teaching and in pioneering novel forms of research that reach across traditional boundaries.

The School has well established links with other areas of the University such Clinical Neuroscience, Medicine, Informatics and Edinburgh College of Art.

This large and diverse teaching portfolio is augmented by the breadth of our research portfolio, whereby we are able to secure large volumes and value of externally funded research grants. Our core income budget is circa £30m per annum.

In 2020/21, the School welcomed nearly 2500 undergraduate and postgraduate students from around the world onto our diverse range of programmes.
There are over 160 academic staff within the School, and the breadth of expertise ranges from analytic philosophy and the study of English language, through theoretical and applied linguistics, philosophy of science and epistemology and experimental psychology, to cognitive neurosciences and genetic influences on human behaviour.

Alongside this, we have several research centres which further drive our research and help put our research into practice, connecting academia with industry, policy and the general public, for example:

- Alzheimer Scotland Dementia Research Centre – dementia research centre in collaboration with Alzheimer Scotland.

- Angus McIntosh Centre for Historical Linguistics – research centre focused on historical linguistics and language change, centred on the history of English and Scots.

- Bilingualism Matters – a centre promoting bilingualism and language learning to the general public.

- The Centre for Language Evolution – interdisciplinary centre focused on understanding the origins and evolution of language.

- EIDYN – Philosophy research centre focusing on epistemology, mind and normativity.

- The Edinburgh Centre for Data, Culture & Society - provides our community of practice with space for experimentation, innovation and skills development, and gives tailored support to research groups and projects.

The School offers extensive professional service support for academics across a wider range of administrative operations, including:

- Dedicated undergraduate and postgraduate teaching offices.

- Research and knowledge exchange support team.

- A highly skilled and specialised IT team who provide support relating to learning technology, and extensive support and facilities for data collection and experimentation across cognitive science.
Professor Simon Kirby
Head of Linguistics and English Language

Simon Kirby joined the University in 1996 and was made Personal Chair of Language Evolution in 2009.

He specializes in evolutionary computational models of human language and its development, and currently manages an ESRC funded grant investigating how the mechanisms of the cultural evolution of language drive the change from natural to conventional word order.

Professor Kirby became Head of Subject Area in 2022.

Dr Dan Lassiter
Research Advisor

Dan Lassiter's research focuses on semantics and pragmatics, especially modality, gradation, causation, conditionals, discourse models, and manipulative speech.

He is currently PI on a BA/Leverhulme-funded project on the effects of information packaging on experimental measures of truth, acceptability, and probability.

Who’s Who in The School of PPLS

Who’s Who in The Department of Linguistics and English Language

Who’s Who in The School of PPLS

Professor Holly Branigan
Head of School

Prof Branigan joined the Psychology department at the University in 1999 after a BA in Language and Linguistic Science (York), an MSc and PhD in Cognitive Science (Edinburgh), and a British Academy Fellowship (Glasgow/Edinburgh).

She has held a Personal Chair in Psychology of Language and Cognition since 2011. Her main areas of interest are language production and dialogue in monolingual and bilingual adults. More recently, she has also begun to carry out related research with typically and atypically developing children.

Prof Branigan was made Interim Head of School in August 2017 and permanently took up the role in 2019.

Prof Bettelou Los
Deputy Head of School

Professor Los joined the University in 2013 as Forbes Chair of English Language.

Her main research interests are historical linguistics, the history of English, diachronic syntax and the interaction of syntax with information structure.

She was Head of Subject Area Linguistics and English Language from 2014–2017 and became Deputy Head of School from July 2021.

Margarida Teixeria-Dias
Director of Professional Services

Director of Professional Services
Margarida Teixeira Dias joined the School of PPLS from the College of Science and Engineering in July 2021 and has worked in higher education for 7 years. As Director of Professional Services, Margarida leads the organisation, planning and management of the comprehensive range support services within the School, and works closely with senior academic managers to support School planning, strategy and financial management.
For more than four centuries, our people and their achievements have rewritten history time and again. They've explored space, revolutionised surgery, published era-defining books, paved the way for life-saving medical breakthroughs and introduced to the world many inventions, discoveries and ideas from penicillin to Dolly the sheep. We have believed that anything is possible, we still do.

The latest Research Excellence Framework highlighted our place at the forefront of international research. This adds to our international reputation for the quality of our teaching and our student experience excellence. The University is proud of its success with online teaching initiatives, with 2550 students currently studying its online distance learning postgraduate programmes, and a total to date of more than 2 million enrolments for Edinburgh Massive Open Online Courses (MOOCs).

As a member of staff, you will be part of one of the world’s leading universities, with 20 Schools spread over 3 Colleges, where more than 49,000 students matriculated in 2022/23. Professional services are critical to this success as well as our world-class teaching, research and student facilities. In fact, we are one of the top employers in Edinburgh, with over 13,000 people spread across a wide range of academic and supporting roles.

As a world-changing, world-leading university, we offer an exciting, positive, creative, challenging and rewarding place to work. We give you support, nurture your talent, develop and reward success and integrate academic, professional and personal career goals, as well as give your career the benefit of a great and distinguished reputation.

Pay, Benefits and Conditions

In addition to a competitive salary, our employees benefit from a competitive reward package and a wide range of staff benefits, which include:

- generous annual leave allowance.
- defined benefits pension scheme which offers a guaranteed retirement income based on your salary. The University currently pays a monthly contribution equal to 19.5% of your salary, while you pay 8.8%.
- staff discounts on a range of services.
- on-campus nurseries.
- The University also offers a generous suite of policies around family leave. Examples of our policies can be viewed here.

Access our staff benefits page for further information and use our reward calculator to find out the total value of pay and benefits provided.
Relocation

Edinburgh is one of the most diverse Universities in the UK, with staff and students from over 160 countries. Our International Staff website has been created to assist you, and your family, with settling into life in Edinburgh.

Relocation Polices

Relocation support can be provided to both domestic and international appointees in line with the University relocation policy.

The University is also able to provide support to partners of new appointees wishing to transition career (more information can be found here).

International Relocation Support

Once you have a job offer from the University, you may need to apply for a visa to work in the UK. If you are applying for a highly skilled role or are a sponsored researcher the University may be able to sponsor you through through a skilled worker (formally tier 2) visa route, or help you in applying for an exceptional talent (formally tier 1) visa.

An overview of the visa processes can be found here.

The University currently has a dedicated International Staff Advisor, who is able to assist with each stage of any visa process, both before and after arriving in the UK.

Along with PPLS HR, they will be able to assist with the following areas:

- Initial advice with relation to suitable visa routes
- Free and impartial specialist advice on UK immigration matters for prospective and current staff, visitors and their accompanying dependants
- Advice on how to complete the applications required
- Guidance on the UK immigration rules and regulations
- Support in relation to understanding of university policy with relation to visa fees and reimbursement
- Further advice and guidance when dealing with Indefinite Leave to Remain

Immigration Fees

There are two types of support currently in place, the Interest Free Loan and Visa Fee Reimbursement.

The University offers assistance for fees you incur in relation to your Skilled Worker, Exceptional Talent or UK Residency applications and associated UK legal fees. In respect of Skilled worker and Exceptional Talent this includes payments for immigration healthcare surcharge fees (NHS) and National Academic Recognition Information Centre (NARIC) fees. PPLS HR will advise on this process in full at the time of offer.
Edinburgh is a beautiful city that has something to offer everyone. Whether you prefer a quiet restaurant, a lively night out or something in between, you are bound to find it in Edinburgh. Regularly ranked as one of the “Best Place to Live in the UK”, Edinburgh has many strings to its bow.

Culture and Entertainment

Home to the largest arts festival in the world, The Edinburgh International Festival brings the month of August alive in the city where residents are spoilt with first class theatre, music, performance art and comedy all on their doorstep. The abundance of galleries and museums such as The Museum of Scotland, Scottish National Gallery and Scottish National Portrait Gallery to name but a few, means that there is always opportunity to soak up some culture all year round.

For those who wish to feed their bellies as well as their minds, Edinburgh boasts the highest number of Michelin starred restaurants in the Scotland, and has more restaurants per head of population than any other UK city outside of London.

The historic appeal of the Athens of the North has led it to become renowned for its monuments and attractions including the Scott Monument, National Monument on Calton Hill and of course the Edinburgh Castle itself; which dominates the city skyline, no more so than on Hogmanay with the world’s biggest street party and fireworks extravaganza to match!

Transport and Districts

Air Links - Several airlines fly to the Edinburgh from the principal European cities, and there are very frequent services from London. If booked well in advance, travel to Edinburgh by air can be cheap, particularly from London. For more information check the Edinburgh Airport website. Bus and tram connections operate 24/7 and with an average journey time of 25-30mins form the city centre.

Rail Links - Travelling to Edinburgh from other parts of the UK is generally easy by train and both Waverly and Haymarket train stations are centrally located, with support routes provided by the bus and tram networks.

Transport Around Edinburgh – Edinburgh has an excellent level of public transport provision compared to many cities in the UK. We have our own Transport and Parking Department here in the University of Edinburgh. They provide lots of advice on getting around the city plus details on staff parking facilities on campus.
Edinburgh Districts

Edinburgh is a highly sought after place to live. Its beautiful city centre covers the Georgian splendour of the New Town, with its grand terraces, crescents, gardens, and upmarket shopping boutiques and bars, and the narrow closes, winding stairways, and historic charms of the Old Town. Nearby communities such as Morningside, Bruntsfield, Stockbridge and Newington remain in easy reach of the city centre as well provide a local community feel.

Explore all of Edinburgh's distracts on our website.

Nurseries and Schools

Based at King's Buildings, The University's Arcadia Nursery, designed around the concept of 'free play' by award winning architect Malcolm Fraser, provides the perfect environment for children to blossom.

There is however, no obligation to place your child in University's nursery. There are many other childcare options in Edinburgh. The Edinburgh council website provides information about childcare across the City.

There are two main types of school in the UK, state and independent schools. State Schools make up the majority of schools and are funded by the government. There is no fee for your children to attend these schools. Independent schools require a fee for your child to study there, although there are bursaries available. The school your child can attend is usually dictated by the area in which you live. You cannot apply for a school place until you have an address in the area (this is not the case for fee paying/independent schools). The council has 'catchment areas' for each school and have a duty to provide schooling for your child, but if your first choice school has no places left, they may have to recommend a school further away. As Edinburgh is our capital city, many of the schools fill up quickly. Some families consider living a commutable distance from the city in order to have a larger choice of schools. East Lothian and West Lothian Councils cover school areas a commutable distance from Edinburgh.
