Caroline Elms	The best thing about an undergraduate degree in Classics at Edinburgh is that I have been able to choose what I want to specialise in – I'm really fascinated by Greek mythology and tragedy.
Betsy Ogilvie	I wanted to study Classics and the MSc programmes on offer are really wide-ranging; its actually one of the largest Classics departments in the UK. There are so many courses and options on offer...
Caroline Elms	... from the study of ancient Greece to the late Antique world, Classics is really broad and exciting: you can choose to study history, archaeology, or even ancient languages.
Betsy Ogilvie	The teaching here has a brilliant reputation and I think its because the lecturers love what they do; they're really passionate about their subjects and its so inspiring!
Caroline Elms	It never gets boring! There are loads of cool coffee shops and quirky places. I live right next to the University gym and there are great running routes; there's also loads of bars, an amazing nightlife...
Betsy Ogilvie	... green spaces, nature, cycle routes, museums and galleries. I fell in love with the city. The buildings and architecture are beautiful.
Caroline Elms	Its not just about studying! There is also a huge range of clubs and societies. I'm a host on the student radio and I'm a member of the theatre company.
Betsy Ogilvie	I'm part of the renaissance choir and the Classics Society is a chance for me to get to know the people on my course better. I also help to arrange our own Classics seminar series with other postgraduates.
Caroline Elms	There are so many opportunities here and what's refreshing is the university actively wants to get you involved.
Betsy Ogilvie	The skills I have developed on my degree have really opened up academic and non-academic career paths for me. The Careers Service here has given me huge amounts of support for finding work after graduation.
Caroline Elms	Classics at the University of Edinburgh is a chance to discover who you are through an amazing range of opportunities.
Betsy Ogilvie	Get in touch to find out more and start your own student journey.
